

Frankenstein (BBC Dramatization)

Michael Maloney stars in this dark, brooding dramatization of Mary Shelley's famous novel. Frankenstein, first published in 1818, is widely recognized as being one of the first science fiction novels. Victor Frankenstein, an ambitious young scientist and seeker after knowledge, considers it the pinnacle of his career when he makes a creature in his own name. But his triumph soon turns to horror, and he is appalled when the creature, denied a female counterpart, turns against his creator and commits a terrible crime. In a desperate attempt to destroy his creation, the scientist tracks him from Europe to the desolate North Pole, and in this bleak landscape of ice and fog, prepares to confront his nemesis. With Michael Maloney as Frankenstein and John Wood as the creature, this spine-tingling dramatization perfectly conveys the book's pervasive sense of unease and dread.
