

Christmas

It was in October that Mary Chavah burned over the grass of her lawn, and the flame ran free across the place where in Spring her wild flower bed was made. Two weeks later she had there a great patch of purple violets. And all Old Trail Town, which takes account of its neighbours flowers, of the migratory birds, of eclipses, and the like, came to see the wonder. Mary Chavah! said most of the village, youre the luckiest woman alive. If a miracle was bound to happen, itd get itself happened to you. I dont believe in miracles, though, Mary wrote to Jenny Wing. These come just naturalonly we dont know how. That is miracles, Jenny wrote back. They do come naturalwe dont know how. At this rate, said Ellen Bourne, one of Marys neighbours, youll be having roses bloom in your yard about Christmas time. For a Christmas present. I dont believe in Christmas, Mary said. I thought you knew that. But Ill take the roses, though, if they come in the Winter, she added, with her queer flash of smile.
