

U.S. National Forest Campground Guide: Pacific Southwest Region - South Section

Leave behind the stress and crowds of a busy life and enter a place of towering beauty and magnificent vistas, of quiet and solitude, of challenges and rewards. And its all within a day or two drive from the dense population centers found in California, south of Sacramento. Challenging the sights in neighboring Kings Canyon and Sequoia National Parks is the towering and serene beauty of Inyo, Sierra and Sequoia National Forests. And while views found in Yosemite National Park are memorable, those found in Inyo and Stanislaus National Forests are magnificent and without the crowds. Visitors can experience the awesome quiet of a desert at sunrise when camping in the Cleveland National Forest or the calm of a Pacific Ocean beach sunset when visiting Los Padres National Forest. Although within a short drive of the Los Angeles basin, finding a place of solitude in the San Bernardino or Angeles National Forests isn't difficult. Visitors need only to put on their boots and go for a hike or launch their boat, kayak, or raft and spend a day on the water. The greatest challenge posed by national forests south of Sacramento is narrowing down the many and varied choices for recreating. But the rewards to accepting the challenge are many and great. Whether you camp in a tent or a recreational vehicle (RV), there are campgrounds in U.S. National Forests to satisfy the needs of most campers. The U.S. National Forest Campground Guide, Pacific Southwest Region (South Section), describes 238 developed campgrounds in 8 National Forests located in California, south of Sacramento. All of the campgrounds were personally visited and researched by the authors of this Guide. There are more than 50 items of information for each campground, narrative descriptions (including authors anecdotes), maps displaying the relative location of the campgrounds, and quick look-up tables to help in the selection of a campground. In addition, there are sidebars throughout the Guide containing useful infor
