

My Young Days: Paul Konewka

Excerpt: I want to go home! How many times in my life, I wonder, have these words come rushing up from the very bottom of my heart, tumbling everything out of the way, never listening to reason, never stopping for thought? How many times since that dreary afternoon in the great, big drawing-room at grandmamas? And, oh dear me! what miserable heartache comes before that fearful want! Oh, grown-up people, dont you know how sour everything tastes, and how yellow everything looks, and how sick everything makes one, when one wants to go home?
