

Rollo in the Woods

One pleasant morning in the autumn, when Rollo was about five years old, he was sitting on the platform, behind his fathers house, playing. He had a hammer and nails, and some small pieces of board. He was trying to make a box. He hammered and hammered, and presently he dropped his work down and said, fretfully, O dear me! What is the matter, Rollo? said Jonas, for it happened that Jonas was going by just then, with a wheelbarrow. I wish these little boards would not split so. I cannot make my box. You drive the nails wrong; you put the wedge sides with the grain. The wedge sides! said Rollo; what are the wedge sides, and the grain? I do not know what you mean. But Jonas went on, trundling his wheelbarrow; though he looked round and told Rollo that he could not stop to explain it to him then.
