

The sources of Gullivers travels

Gulliver's Travels were probably composed between 1720 and 1724. Swift had experienced in his political career his greatest disappointment. He had not succeeded in becoming an English bishop and he had received for all his labors and troubles only the deanery of St. Patrick at Dublin. The party of which he was one of the most clever and energetic adherents was no longer in power, since the death of Queen Anne, and his political friends, such as Bolingbroke and Ormond had fled, while Oxford, Wyndham, Prior and others were imprisoned. Swift himself had sought refuge in Ireland from the dangers which threatened him and all the partisans of the Tory ministry. ...
