

The Golden Slipper, and Other Problems for Violet Strange

Shes here! I thought she would be. Shes one of the three young ladies you see in the right-hand box near the proscenium. The gentleman thus addressed a man of middle age and a member of the most exclusive club sturned his opera glass toward the spot designated, and in some astonishment retorted: She? Why those are the Misses Pratt and Miss Violet Strange; no other. And do you mean to say I do That you silly little chit, whose father I know, whose fortune I know, who is seen everywhere, and who is called one of the seasons belles is an agent of yours; aa No names here, please. You want a mystery solved. It is not a matter for the police that is, as yet, and so you come to me, and when I ask for the facts, I find that women and only women are involved, and that these women are not only young but one and all of the highest society. Is it a mans work to go to the bottom of a combination like this? No. Sex against sex, and, if possible, youth against youth. Happily, I know such a persona girl of gifts and extraordinarily well placed for the purpose. Why she uses her talents in this direction why, with means enough to play the part natural to her as a successful debutante, she consents to occupy herself with social and other mysteries, you must ask her, not me. Enough that I promise you her aid if you want it. That is, if you can interest her. She will not work otherwise.
