Not illustrated. 1870 Excerpt: ... lay. I dropped you, did I? he says, picking it up, and recalling that part of his dream. As he gathers himself again into an upright position, or into a position as nearly upright as he ever maintains, he is again conscious of being watched by his companion. Well? says Jasper, smiling. Are you quite ready? Pray dont hurry. Let me get my bundle right, Mister Jarsper, and Im with As he ties it afresh, he is once more conscious that he is very narrowly observed. What do you suspect me of, Mister Jarsper? he asks, with drunken displeasure. Let them as has any suspicions of Durdles, name em. Ive no suspicions of you, my good Mr. Durdles; but I have suspicions that my bottle was filled with something stiffer than either of us supposed. And I also have suspicions, Jasper adds, taking it from the pavement and turning it bottom upward, that its empty. Durdles condescends to laugh at this. Continuing to chuckle when his laugh is over, as though remonstrant with himself on his drinking powers, he rolls to the door and unlocks it. They both pass out, and Durdles relocks it, and pockets his key. A thousand thanks for a curious and interesting night, says Jasper, giving him his hand; you can make your own way home? I should think so! answers Durdles. If you was to offer Durdles the affront to show him his way home, he wouldnt go home. Durdles wouldnt go home till morning,, And then Durdles wouldnt go home, Durdles wouldnt. This, with the utmost defiance.Good-night, then.Good-night, Mister Jarsper. Each is turning his own way, when a sharp whistle rends the silence, and the jargon is yelped out: W...
