Excerpt: ... 167 VII. POMPILIA. I Am just seventeen years and five months old, And, if I lived one day more, three full weeks; T is writ so in the churchs register, Lorenzo in Lucina, all my names At length, so many names for one poor child, --Francesca Camilla Vittoria Angela Pompilia Comparini,--laughable! Alsot is writ that I was married there Four years ago: and they will add, I hope, When they insert my death, a word or two,-- Omitting all about the mode of death,-- This, in its place, this which one cares to know, That I had been a mother of a son Exactly two weeks. It will be through grace O the Curate, not through any claim I have; Because the boy was born at, so baptized Close to, the Villa, in the proper church: A pretty church, I say no word against, Yet stranger-like,--while this Lorenzo seems My own particular place, I always say. 20 I used to wonder, when I stood scarce high As the bed here, what the marble lion meant, With half his body rushing from the wall, Eating the figure of a prostrate man-- (To the right, it is, of entry by the door) 25 An ominous sign to one baptized like me, Married, and to be buried there, I hope. And they should add, to have my life complete, He is a boy and Gaetan by name-- Gaetano, for a reason,--if the friar 30 Don Celestine will ask this grace for me Of Curate Ottoboni: he it was Baptized me: he remembers my whole life As I do his grey hair. All these few things 35 I know are true,--will you remember them? Because time flies. The surgeon cared for me, To count my wounds,--twenty-two dagger-wounds, Five deadly, but I do not suffer much-- Or too much pain,--and am to die to-night. 40 Oh how good God is that my babe was born, --Better than born, baptized and hid away

Before this happened, safe from being hurt!
