

The Stolen Bacillus: (H G Wells Masterpiece Collection)

This again, said the Bacteriologist, slipping a glass slide under the microscope, is well, a preparation of the Bacillus of cholera the cholera germ. The pale-faced man peered down the microscope. He was evidently not accustomed to that kind of thing, and held a limp white hand over his disengaged eye. I see very little, he said. Touch this screw, said the Bacteriologist; perhaps the microscope is out of focus for you. Eyes vary so much. Just the fraction of a turn this way or that. Ah! now I see, said the visitor. Not so very much to see after all. Little streaks and shreds of pink. And yet those little particles, those mere atomies, might multiply and devastate a city! Wonderful! He stood up, and releasing the glass slip from the microscope, held it in his hand towards the window. Scarcely visible, he said, scrutinising the preparation. He hesitated. Are these alive? Are they dangerous now? Those have been stained and killed, said the Bacteriologist. I wish, for my own part, we could kill and stain every one of them in the universe. I suppose, the pale man said, with a slight smile, that you scarcely care to have such things about you in the living in the active state? On the contrary, we are obliged to, said the Bacteriologist. Here, for instance He walked across the room and took up one of several sealed tubes. Here is the living thing. This is a cultivation of the actual living disease bacteria. He hesitated. Bottled cholera, so to speak.
