

The Trail of the Goldseekers: A Record of Travel in Prose and Verse

I will wash my brain in the splendid breeze, I will lay my cheek to the northern sun, I will drink the breath of the mossy trees, And the clouds shall meet me one by one. I will fling the scholars pen aside, And grasp once more the broncos rein, And I will ride and ride and ride, Till the rain is snow, and the seed is grain. The way is long and cold and lone But I go. It leads where pines forever moan Their weight of snow, Yet I go. There are voices in the wind that call, There are hands that beckon to the plain; I must journey where the trees grow tall, And the lonely heron clamors in the rain.
