Yet, nothing could have induced me to make you this present of my poor endeavours, were I not encouraged by that candour and native goodness which is so bright a part in your lordships character. I might add, my lord, that the extraordinary favour and bounty you have been pleased to shew towards our Society gave me hopes you would not be unwilling to countenance the studies of one of its members. These considerations determined me to lay this treatise at your lordships feet, and the rather because I was ambitious to have it known that I am with the truest and most profound respect, on account of that learning and virtue which the world so justly admires in your lordship, 1 Thomas Herbert, eighth Earl Oxford, in 1672; succeeded to his of Pembroke and fifth Earl of Mont-titles in 1683; was sworn of the gomery, was the correspondent Privy Council in 1689; and made and friend of Locke--whodedicated a Knight of the Garter in 1700. his famous Essay to him, as a work He filled some of the highest having some little correspondence offices in the state, in the reigns with some parts of that nobler of William and Mary, and of Anne, and vast system of the sciences He was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland your lordship has made so new, in 1707, having previously been exact, and instructive a draft of. one of the Commissioners by whom He represents a family renowned the union between England and in English political and literary Scotland was negotiated.
